Lord Canning, of his own accord, has issued a letter to the local governments, promising all assistance to volunteer rifle corps of not less than fifty members, and to private rifle clubs throughout India. The corps are to be supplied with everything but uniform, and to be under the same regulations as are applicable to the English volunteers.

The indigo districts of Lower Bengal are again in a state of excitement. The peasantry refuse to take advances, and are afraid to go to the factories. The planters ask for a summary contract law, and good courts and magistrates. There seems to be no prospect of an immediate settlement of the difficulty.

The rebel Thakoor of Awah has been apprehended. Feroze Shah is said to be in Rojhgarh, Central India.

Government has issued a notification informing the local European army that the amalgamation of the armies will not affect their rights and privileges; that they will not be called on to serve out of India during the term of their engagement.
